CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION

This Bibiliography has been compiled in order to bring forth material available for the study of the Punjab from 1849 to 1910. Such a work was needed to encourage and facilitate research on the subject. A study of the Punjab is very essential. The Punjab held an important position in Indo-Pakistan Sub-continent. Apart from being an agrarian 'depot' and richest recruiting centre for military forces, it played an equally important role in the political activities of the country. It, within no time, became the nerve-centre of Muslim politics. It was here in Lahore that the Pakistan Resolution was passed by the Muslim League in 1940. It was again the Punjab which gave birth to such Muslim stalwarts as Nawab Mohammad Hayat Khan, Khan Bahadur Barkat Ali, Dr. Muhammad Iqbal, Mian Sir Mohammad Shafi, Sir Fazl-i-Hussain, Malik Barkat Ali, Sir Sikandar Hayat and others.

The Punjab needs more study than has been accorded to it in the past. Before independence, our Department did considerable work in this field. A large number of articles were printed in the "Journal of the Punjab Historical Society" (later Punjab University Historical Society). Record Office also published a number of monographs on the subject. After 1947, very little has, however, been published in our country on the study of the Punjab, and there is considerable scope and need for work on this area. It is hoped that this Bibliography would be of some use and interest for those who would undertake research on the Punjab.

The scope of this book is limited. It deals only wih the period from 1849 to 1910, though I have also included a few titles pertaining to the period immediately before 1849. This short period was selected in order to facilitate the compilation of a reasonably complete bibliography. It is also intended to serve as a precedent for similar works on other periods of the history of the Punjab and other areas. Its second volume, bringing it upto date, is under preparation.

Apart from all the local libraries, I have also made use of the catalogues of foreign libraries. I have tried to give full particulars regarding each publication, but in some cases this has not been possible. All the entries have not been physically verified. Some titles were taken from references and a few others, from catalogues. The titles have been printed in italics (except for the chapter on articles), and the names of the authors have been given in capital letters. Each title has been given a serial number. Entries in the index show their respective numbers.

The Bibliography consists of six chapters. The first, dealing with books, has two parts. The first includes those books whose authors have been given, and the second, those which are anonymous or the identity of whose authors could not be determined. The second chapter lists government reports. It includes Annual, Periodic, Settlement, Assessment and Census Reports, Gazetteers, Reports on Customary Law, Manuals and other Miscellaneous publications. The names of their authors, wherever available, have been given in brackets. The third chapter consists of printed selections from the Records of the Office of the Financial Commissioner (Punjab), and of the Punjab Administration. It includes both old and new series. The fourth chapter deals with Manuscripts. It has been compiled on the basis of 'A Guide to Western Manuscripts and Documents in the British Isles relating to South and South East Asia', (London, 1965), Index of Post-1937 European Manuscript Accessions, India Office Library (Boston, 1964) and the catalogues of Manuscripts preserved in the Public Library, Lahore. It, however, does not include official records available in the India Office Library. I am grateful to the School of Oriental and African Studies, London, for having very graciously allowed me to use the 'Guide to Western Manuscripts and Documents', for compilation of this chapter. Place of availability is given at the end of the titles of the Manuscripts. The fifth chapter includes articles. An attempt has been made to include as many articles on the subject as possible. Because of the shortage of time and lack of facilities, a complete list is not claimed. The last chapter deals with theses. It includes mainly those submitted at the Punjab University, Lahore for M.A. Degree. Their particulars were taken from the list of theses (presented at the University), published as an appendix to the Journal of Punjab University Historical Society (June, 1960).

Books, articles and theses have been arranged according to their authors. Their surnames have been given first but Oriental names like Abdul Ghafoor, Abdul Ghani have not been split. The Annual and Periodic reports have been compiled under subject headings. Settlement, Assessment and Customary Law Reports have been grouped according to their districts. Their respective tehsils have also been given. In case of Customary Law Reports, the year of their publication is given under the districts. Manuals and Miscellaneous Government publications have again been arranged subject wise. The gazetteers have been divided into Imperial, British Districts and States gazetteers. The first have been given in chronological order; the second and third, in alphabetical order. These include both "A" and "B" parts. Selections from Records of the Office of the Financial Commissioner (Punjab) and the Punjab Administration have been given in serial order of their publications. Manuscripts have been arranged according to papers of personalities and organisations. There are also a number of miscellaneous papers. Those relating to this period and available at the Punjab Public Library (Lahore), have been given at the end.

Most of the works listed in the Bibliography are contemporary works. They are either memoirs or books written by I.C.S. Officers, on the basis of information and data collected during their official assignments. Though not histories in true sense, they contain valuable information on the subject. The Government Reports which were frequently published during this period also provide sufficient material. The Settlement and Assessment Reports give indispensable information about land tenure, colonization, and rates and other related subjects. The Reports on Customary Law provide useful reading on the subject. Manuals have been included to enable readers to have an understanding of working of various departments of the Punjab Administration. Gazetteers give varied information about history, economic development, social conditions, land management etc. Part 'A' Gazetteers give descriptive account while part 'B' contain statistical data. Though they all contain useful information they are basically government publications and represent official version of the various developments in the province.

I had collected, for my own use, the titles of a large number of books on this period during my studies in the United Kingdom. When those in charge of Research Society of Pakistan came to know about this, they encouraged me to enlarge the scope of my work, and undertake the present project. The Society financed the project and provided all the facilities needed for its compilation. I am grateful to its Board of Governors for having sponsored its publication.

I must also take this opportunity to thank our Vice-Chancellor Prof. Hamid Ahmad Khan, for all his endeavours for the promotion of research in the University. Dr. S.M. Ikram's encouragement, guidance and keenness were of immense help in its completion. Without his assistance, the project might not have been implemented. Prof. Sh. Abdur Rashid very kindly helped me in planning and arranging its contents. My special thanks are due to Prof. Dr. Muhammad Baqir, Principal Oriental College, Lahore; Prof. Dr. Abdul Hamid, former Head of History Department, Prof. Dr. Anwar Hussain Syed, Head of the Department of Political Science, and Mr. Rafique Afzal, Secretary, Research Society of Pakistan for their valuable suggestions and guidance. I should also thank my colleagues for their encouragement and help. Mr. Muhammad Rafique typed the script and Messrs Din Muhammadi Press have taken considerable pains in its printing.
